HAN THEY CAN'T FORGET

WOODROW WILSON WHO GAVE PEOPLE THEIR ENTHUSIASM.

They Knew He Gave Them Their Greatest Ideals, With Hopes, Faith and a Vision.

The Man They Cannot Forget.

Collier's Weekly of the present week contains a superb editorial under the above title, which every American should read and read with profit. In part it said:

Perhaps the memory of great enthusiasms is the explanation of the persistent, mysterious, unconscious way in which men to-day draw together around Woodrow Wilson. It requires explanation. Why, in Washington for months now, has the sight-seeing wagon followed his car? Why do the chattering tourists inside grow silent as they pass it? They don't peer. They lift their hats and sigh, and it sometimes takes minutes and striking sights to break the mood the fleeting glimpses of the drawn, long white face has stirred.

Why is it that on Sundays and holidays men and women and children—most of them busy through the week—walk to his house and stand there in groups, speak together in hushed tones as if something solemn and ennobling moved in them? Curiosity? Men chatter and gibe and jostle in curiosity. These people are silent gentle, and orderly. You will see them before the theatre on nights when it is known that Mr. Wilson is within, quietly waiting for him to come out. There will be fifty, a hundred, even sometimes a thousand.

They cheer him as he passes, and there are often chokes in the cheers, and always tenderness. Why do they do it? Nothing more instinctive, more unplanned, goes on in Washington. Let it be known that he is in his seat in a theatre, and the whole house will rise in homage. Let his face be thrown on the screen, and it will draw a greeting that the face of no other living American receives. And that is not true in Washington alone.

Why should the vast throng that packed Pennsylvania Avenue from end to end on Armistice Day have stood reverently, with heads bared in silence as the bier of the Unknown Soldier passed, attended by all the official greatness of the moment—the President, his Cabinet, the Supreme Court, the House, the Senate, the Diplomatic Corps, Pershing, Foch—why should this great crowd have watched in silence until quite unexpectedly, a carriage far down the line came to view? Why should this crowd, unconscious of what it was doing, have broken into a low cry of sympathy and grief: "There's Wilson!" The cry flew down the long avenue.

They saw him as the man who had called into service the boy they honored, who had put the wonderful light in his eye, that light of which a great French surgeon said: "The American soldier is different from all others. I don't know what it is, whether it is God, the Monroe Doctrine, or President Wilson; but he has something in his eye." Yes, Wilson's place was by the dead soldier, and the people knew it, and told him so by their unconscious outburst.

Woodrow Wilson means something to the people of the United States: something profound, something they cannot forget. People think of him now as the man who was behind the inspiration of their greatest moments; who stirred them to a fresh understanding of the meaning of words that had become mere parter on many tongues—"democracy," "union." He made them realities, personal, deep—showed them as the reason of all that is good in our present, all that is hopeful in our future, the working basis on which men may strive to liberty of soul and peaceful achievement. He made them literally things to die for, lifting all of our plain, humble thousands who never knew applause or wealth or the honor of office into the ranks of those who are willing to die for an ideal—the highest plane that humans reach.

People are thinking, also, or his work in that after-war period when the hate, revenge, and bitterness that war has loosed have none of the restraints that war compels, and we must, by reason and good will and patience, restore our controls—that terrible period we speak of as reconstruction. There too he kindled enthusiasm. "Now," he said, "let us do what men have long dreamed—give to each people its chance, cut down the foolish barriers of trade, limit our armaments, enter into a union of all nations pledged to co-operation and peace."

The peoples of the earth rallied to his plan, pledged themselves. And then the loosed passions began their war on him. Those who wanted peace and believed it easy; those who hated peace and believed it impossible; those who envied his place, differed with his judgments, failed in an attack such as few men have ever faced in the history of this earth. He fought to a finish, that he might secure the pledge of the nations to the ideal of world co-operation.

He won—won with the peoples of the world, if not with all of their governments. They look to him as No clues were found to the thieves.

the man who drove that ideal so deep into the soul of the nations that no man or man can ever destroy it. It has become an asset of tormented humanity, a possible way out of slaughter and hate. Through all the future, men will be building upon it, adapting, expanding, as men have built on Washington's work, on Lincoln's work, knowing that their efforts rest on something essentially sound and secure.

They are simple people, remember, those thousands whose hearts he had enkindled. They are the people who do the work of the world, and their minds are easily bewildered. "He has deceived you," they were told. "He has given you dreams. Dreams are not for men. You live by realities, not ideals. Out with him! Down with him! As a great nation, you have strength, you have gold. Keep them. Stand alone. Do not forget that you do not live by ideals."

And the people withdrew—bewildered. But the shouting over, they remembered their long days of exaltation, of sacrifice, of freedom and boldness, of worthwhileness. Was it only a deception? Was all they had felt a mere magic of words on their untrained minds, the stir of fleeting passion in their lives? Was there no sense, no reality, in it all?

That is what thousands upon thousands have been asking in these past days. And slowly they are turning to him who led them. His suffering face and palsied side are a symbol of their crippled hopes. "How is it with him?" they ask, "a living sacrifice to that faith and that vision? Does he still believe? Has he lost faith as well as strength?"

And so they seek him. He means something to them: they don't quite know what. He is a living link with their noblest phase. Those who destroyed that phase are giving them nothing in its place. What does it all mean? And so they follow his carriage, gather before his house, stand in rain and snow and cold before the theatre to get even the most fleeting glimpse, something that will bid them live again as they did in those great moments.

Nine Year Old Girl Raped.

Oliver Kump, 20 years old, of Hamilton township, was arrested by State Police on Tuesday evening Feb. 21, charged with statutory rape on Stella Kump, the nine year old child of John R. Kump, and after signing a confession was placed in jail. The crime took place on Monday afternoon, the little girl was returning from school with her two brothers along the Cold Springs road. Oliver Kump called to her and she went to where he was standing and after talking to her awhile he succeeded in getting her to go with him into a clump of bushes along the road, and when about 25 feet from the road he placed his hand over her mouth to prevent her screams being heard and threw her down and accomplished his purposes. When the little girl reached home her condition and the fact that the mother through the window saw Oliver Kump running through a field to his home, aroused her suspicions and Stella broke down and told her story. Dr. Ira Henderson, of Fairfield, was once sent for and found evidence of the criminal assault. The little girl's condition is serious.

Tuesday morning the State Police were notified and went to home of Jacob Kump, father of Oliver Kump, but Oliver was not at home, and was found at home of Charles Kump, an uncle, when he was arrested. At first he denied his crime. When taken before the little girl, Stella Kump, he was identified by her as the party who had assaulted her. He was brought to town and finally broke down, admitted his guilt and signed a confession and was placed in jail.

Stolen Sedan Recovered.

A Ford sedan belonging to J. L. Hereter was stolen on Tuesday evening about six thirty in Hagerstown and was discovered along the road from Greencastle to Chambersburg early Wednesday morning. Mrs. Hereter and Miss Maybelle Hereter had gone to Hagerstown to visit Mrs. Roy Phillip on Monday, intending to stay several days. The car was stolen while standing in front of the Phillip home. Mr. Phillip was attending a meeting in Gettysburg on Tuesday and word was sent to him to look out for the car on his way home. He discovered it not far from Chambersburg where it had been abandoned in bad condition, broken headlights, bent fenders and broken radius rod, suggesting a collision. Tickets are now on sale.

COMMUNITY

PREACHMENT AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE LUNCHEON.

Some Excellent Plans Outlined for Co-operation Between Bankers and Farmers.

The Gettysburg Chambers of Commerce entertained at a luncheon at the Hoffman House on last Friday evening. Wm. B. Woods, cashier of the Mifflin County National Bank at Lewistown, and Frank Zimmerman of the Chambersburg Trust Company, and both members of the Agriculture Committee of the State Bankers' Association. There were sixty-five at the luncheon, members of the Chamber of Commerce, bankers and farmers.

Wm. B. Woods was the first speaker and gave a practical talk of the team work possible between bankers, farmers and business men and declared that when the "farmer stops buying business stops and when his buys business goes." And he told of the wonderful condition resulting from team work at Grove City, Mercer county, Pa. In the work to be pushed would be an annual farm show, pure-bred cattle and accredited herds, pure-bred hogs, better rural schools and consolidation, reforestation, campaign against investments of doubtful character, co-operation with the farm agent good road and standardization of grading of farm products.

Frank Zimmerman in his talk told of the way the banks and Chamber of Commerce were co-operating in Chambersburg. At several points pig clubs are being organized and the club decides the breed to be raised. The bank sends off an order for a car load of the best bred pigs of the kind wanted and the farmers get the pigs when car is received and pay for them to the bank and when immediate payment did not suit, notes were taken and held by the bank.

Until coming to Gettysburg in 1914 Mr. Scharf was affiliated with numerous Philadelphia hotels and the Racquet and Merton Cricket Clubs. While in Philadelphia he was president of the Philadelphia Stewards' Association.

Mr. Scharf became manager of the Hotel Gettysburg in 1914 and a stockholder in the Hotel Gettysburg Company in 1917. At the time of his death he was president of the company as well as manager. During the World War Mr. Scharf was chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Food Administration for Adams county.

He was a member of the Ivanhoe Masonic Lodge, No. 449; University R. A. Chapter No. 256 and Mary Commandery Knight Templar, Philadelphia. He was also a member of the Pennsylvania Hotelmen's Association and the Pennsylvania Greetings' Association. He was a member of the local Chamber of Commerce.

After the luncheon Mr. Zimmerman told an interviewer of a condition existing among the banks in Chambersburg that promoted all projects requiring cooperation. Often in town there exists jealousies between banking institutions that are simple waste and one of these is where bankers take a hand in politics and are for this candidate and against that candidate and not for any political reason but because the particular man they are for will deposit with the bank working for him. This condition results more frequently in campaigns involving the election of county treasurer and tax collectors and the condition comes about when treasurers of funds are to be selected like treasurer of poor fund, borough treasurer, school treasurer, etc.

Chambersburg claims that real competition is healthy but scrapping and bad feeling over such treasures simply are waste and prevent co-operation, so some years ago the bankers of Chambersburg got together and eliminated such waste. They have a system by which all the banks have a hand in handling these treasures. There are monthly balances and the funds pass in a round at end of each month from one bank to another and the system established prevented one bank getting all the fat months and another the thin months and the method of rotation has proven entirely satisfactory and gotten rid of all friction and unpleasantness which grew out of all the political maneuvers that were put across to land particular funds. And when there is nothing of the kind making for friction the bankers can get together better and co-operate for the welfare of the community.

After hearing this situation fully explained, one could not help realize that if Gettysburg was in the same boat in these particulars with Chambersburg it would be most conducive to the best welfare of the community.

WILSON FUND OVER $600,000

WONDERFUL RESPONSE THRU-
OUT THE COUNTRY.Tribute for the Foundation Upon the Remarkable Accomplishments of Wilson.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, chairman of the National Committee of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, announced a few days ago that more than $500,000 had been raised in the campaign to obtain an endowment of $1,000,000 for the proposed awards for distinguished public service. The half-way mark was passed on Feb. 15, a month after the date the drive was opened. Mr. Roosevelt said that much more than the figures named probably had been raised, as reports from some of the States have been delayed.

The response throughout the country has been wonderful, especially because the sum represents a vast number of small contributions. Coming in the most part from persons of moderate means, these contributions indicate the faith of the donors in the principles that Mr. Wilson upheld and a desire to honor the great American for the ideals for which he stood.

Thomas L. Chadbourne, former counsel of the War Trade Board prepared the following statement for the Foundation as a tribute to Wilson.

I do not speak as a personal friend of Mr. Wilson's. In that respect I have no other position than millions of people in this and every other country in the world. I have an affection and a respect and an admiration for him that is shared by a very large part of the civilized world.

As time widens the distance between us and the bitterness and cynisms of 1918 and 1919, the loftiness of Mr. Wilson's ideals and the integrity of his purposes are recognized almost universally, and you hear but little adverse comment with respect to these matters. But you still continue to hear adverse comment upon him as an executive. You hear it widely said that he was not a good solicitor of men, that he was unable to translate his ideals and purposes into action, or to put his hand upon men who could crystallize his theories into practice. This has always seemed strange to me, because my chief acquaintance with Mr. Wilson was in Washington during the entire period of the war, observing his hand on the throttle valve of the war machine he created and drove.

I say this idea is strange to me because my life has consisted of contact with men who have been creating and managing great organizations and it is surprising that this country, which now recognizes his Irish idealism and his Scotch determination, fails to recognize that he has to a wonderful degree what for the want of a better phrase I term American efficiency.

When we entered the conflict, Mr. Wilson had in this country for war purposes nothing but a great boneless giant. Somebody put bone and sinew into that giant. If it was not the head of the nation, it must have been the men he selected, for upon him and him alone rested the select power of those who were chosen to conduct the war.

Somebody conceived the Selective Draft Act and procured its passage and created the machinery to register ten million men in less than fifty days after the declaration of war, without one breath of scandal and without one drop of blood being spilled in protest.

Somebody conceived that France and England needed cheering and reded it badly, and put Pershing and his staff across the water on foreign soil within forty-five days of the declaration of war.

Somebody conceived that we had to have men on the firing line, to cheer our Allies, and they were there within four months and a half of the declaration of war.

Somebody procured the training of twenty-seven thousand officers for leadership within four months of the declaration of war.

Somebody performed the miracles of building thirty-two encampments, each housing forty thousand men, within ninety days.

Somebody provided for the transport of two million men across the sea without the loss of a man by casualty, and somebody provided for five million tons of material to go to those men without substantial financial loss of these materials.

Somebody decided that Great Britain had made a mistake in not laying a mine barrage of 255 miles across the North Sea, and somebody did it and lessened the efficiency of the German submarine campaign 50 per cent.

Somebody raised the unprecedented amount of thirty-seven billions of dollars to finance our own and our Allies' needs—more money than this country expended from the time it became a country down to 1917—with a remarkably small disorganization of our finances; and somebody supervised the expenditure of one million dollars an hour during the war.

A Pioneer is "one who goes before, as into the wilderness, preparing the way for others to follow."

It is not always necessary that he wear a coonskin cap and carry a rifle.

When the young Alexander Graham Bell forty-six years ago first sent a voice over a wire by means of an electric current he was a Pioneer, going forth into the little known wilderness of electrical science.

Since that day every development of the telephone has been a pioneering feat. There have been no guide posts to point out the way; no route maps to show which were the smooth roads and which the rough ones.

And Bell Telephone "pioneers" who are today planning for millions of subscribers five, ten and twenty years hence are "preparing the way for others to follow."

Every community served by the Bell System profits by this arrangement. A discovery in California, Texas or Maine is at once available right here in our own state. If the pioneers in our company find something to improve telephone service it is at the disposal of every office in the system where it might properly be used.

Only by such an organization has the Bell System of today been made possible, and only by its continuance is future progress assured.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF PENNSYLVANIA

without the theft of a single penny. Somebody organized the War Risk Insurance Bureau that wrote four million policies for forty billions of dollars and distributed four hundred and fifty million dollars to dependent families of soldiers and sailors.

Somebody created the War Industries Board, which mobilized the manufacturing resources of this country so they were functioning as a single unit for war purposes.

Somebody organized the War Trade Board, which in conjunction with our Allies, blockaded the food to Germany through neutrals so that at the expiration of the war the German population was being starved into submission.

Somebody reached out for Herbert Hoover, the greatest food expert in the world, and organized a food control with a marvellous speed and efficiency.

Somebody took the coal situation in hand and appointed a coal administrator, regulating prices and distributing most effectively for war purposes.

Somebody reached out and secured H P Davison and put him at the head of the Red Cross, with a result that more money was raised for philanthropic purposes than was ever thought of before, and with a further result that the Red Cross organization was expended almost beyond belief.

Let those who maintain that Woodrow Wilson was incapable of translating his ideas into action, or was incapable of selecting men who could accomplish results, explain these remarkable achievements. And if Mr. Wilson is not a great executive and cannot select men, then God grant that in the next great emergency this country has to meet, we have a man equally as inefficient in order that we may have high accomplishments nobly performed.

As a matter of fact, as I watched this man's graceful but wise-like mind, fine personality and untiring energy, during those eighteen months, I likened him to nothing but a great bar of light illuminating every nook and cranny of that struggling war organization he had created, and warming into increased activity the hearts and souls and spirits of every man engaged in that great enterprise.

If there are Adams county people who wish to be among the contributors to the Wilson Foundation, now is the time to send the same payable to Franklin D. Roosevelt, Chairman of Woodrow Wilson Foundation, 150 Nassau street, New York City.

More Dry Agents in Pennsylvania.

John T. Davis, prohibition director of Pennsylvania, has added 19 more agents to his force, and of course none of them are serving without pay. The State has been redistricted into eight districts and Adams county is in District No. 7 with Dauphin, Northumberland, Union, Snyder, part of Schuylkill, Lebanon, Cumberland, York, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon and Mifflin, with six agents and headquarters in Harrisburg.

Waterback Explodes.

Last Friday morning the waterback in the range at the home of L. C. Plank at Table Rock, exploded demolishing the range, breaking every pane of glass in the kitchen windows and doing other damage. The explosion of range threw the burning coal oil over the room. Mrs. Plank and her daughter Gladys were in the kitchen at the time and escaped serious injury. Mrs. Plank was burned on her face and arms. The force of the explosion upset the chair which the daughter occupied. She received some slight burns above and below the eyes. Assistance quickly arrived and extinguished the fire started by the burning coals. It is believed water in the pipe was frozen during the extreme cold weather and in the thawing reached the waterback when hot causing the explosion.

PREVENT FIRES, FIRES—ITAYS.

The fireman on morning train from Littlestown to Philadelphia, had a close shave this week at Wrightsville. At a point in that town the fireman descends and walks in front of his slowly moving engine until past a danger point. He descended as usual and slipped on last step and fell under the moving engine but had the presence of mind to catch hold of an under part and draw himself from under the tender wheels but was dragged through the snow for 40 feet when the engine was stopped and fireman released from his position, suffering from a bruised side. He climbed on his engine and continued his run.

The fireman on morning train from Littlestown to Philadelphia, had a close shave this week at Wrightsville. At a point in that town the fireman descends and walks in front of his slowly moving engine until past a danger point. He descended as usual and slipped on last step and fell under the moving engine but had the presence of mind to catch hold of an under part and draw himself from under the tender wheels but was dragged through the snow for 40 feet when the engine was stopped and fireman released from his position, suffering from a bruised side. He climbed on his engine and continued his run.

DON'T RISK NEGLECT.
Don't neglect a constant backache, sharp, darting pains or urinary disorders. The danger of dropsy or Bright's disease is too serious to ignore. Use Doan's Kidney Pills as have your friends and neighbors. Ask your neighbor. A Gettysburg case

Mrs. Ella Little, 20 Breckinridge St., says: "There are no words of praise good enough for Doan's Kidney Pills. It was only about a year ago that my kidneys were in a very bad condition. I had a stiffness through my limbs, but it was backache that gave me the most trouble.

Sharp pains started through my back very often when I would be working around during the day. I suffered severely when I did any stooping work and no one knows what a time of it I had. Dizziness annoyed me so I thought more than once that I would fall over with it.

I was very much run down and my nerv's gave out altogether. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I lost no time in getting some at the People's Drug Store. I was rid of the backache and dizzy spells and other signs of kidney complaint. My back and kidneys were put in proper condition, too."

Custody of Boy in Question.

A habeas corpus case will be heard on Monday, March 6, involving the custody of a nine year old boy. The boy is Alexis W. Chitzman, son of Wm. A. Chitzman, of Gettysburg. The father filed petition for habeas corpus asking the custody of his son and alleging that Willard Wilt, the maternal grandfather of boy had the custody of the boy. It is alleged the boy has been with Mr. Wilt about a year and Mrs. Chitzman is living in Baltimore. By reason of the absence of President Judge McPherson and Associate Judge E. P. Miller, the petition was presented to Associate Judge H. E. Pearson.

The same day Mr. Wilt filed an answer saying the boy was not in his "custody, power or possession." Judge Pearson ordered that the habeas corpus and all matters relative thereto be heard on Monday March 6 when Judge McPherson will hear the same.
